

I think this proposal is an extremely bad idea. This rule may be good for media companies but it is in no way good for the people of the United States. This rule would mean the big media companies can control all devices that deal with any media. I should be able to use my media any way I want, not any way the big media companies decide to let me. I should be able to own a general purpose computer, even if big media companies don't like it. The FCC is supposed to represent the people of the United States, not the big media companies.
